CITATIONS (APA FORMAT)

When you use a literature source in your research you must acknowledge that source. Students carrying out science research in AP Biology are expected to use the APA (American Psychological Association) format. You can use this style guide to help you format a proper citation for a specific type of source. You can also use a Web "citation engine" that will help you format your citation by going to "Citation Machine". The link below will take you to the APA Format within "Citation Machine". Just choose the type of source you are using from the left-hand menu (book, journal, magazine, online source, etc.) and then type in your information.
